

Visualizing the Relationships that Shape Our Work

An evening in honor of Archana Bali featuring film and photography from research in sciences and humanities around Alaska, Chukotka, and Kamchatka

Public Event

Arctic Science Summit Week 2016

Monday, March 14, 6pm-10pm

Schaible Auditorium, UAF Main Campus

Free Admission

Friends and colleagues of Archana Bali invite the Fairbanks community and participants of the Arctic Science Summit Week to enjoy this free and open to the public event, in loving memory of Archana and in honor of her work as a humanistic scholar and scientist. Time segments for each presentation are scheduled to allow for discussion and commentary from the audience. Start and end times of the presentations listed in the program may be adjusted.

6pm - 6:30pm

Seeing is Listening: Introduction to the ASSW Session on Visual Research in Honor of Archana Bali

Maya Salganek
University of Alaska Fairbanks

6:30 - 7:00

Voices of the Caribou People
Archana Bali
University of Alaska Fairbanks

7:00 - 7:15

Images of Modern Land Use and Caribou Hunting in the National Petroleum Reserve in Alaska
Stacey Fritz
Bureau of Land Management Arctic Field Office

BREAK

7:30 - 7:50

Invitations to Watch: Connecting People and Sharing Knowledge with Ethnographic Footage from Kamchatka
Maité Agopian and Patrick Plattet
University of Alaska Fairbanks

7:50 - 8:10

Igiugig Culture Camp: Film, Research and the Relationships We Make Along the Way
Amber Lincoln
British Museum

8:10 - 8:30

Elements for Successful Participatory Video Research: Lessons Learned in the Arctic
Annette Watson
College of Charleston

8:30 - 8:45

Filming Alaska's Yellow Billed Loons: A Youth Experience
Dev Dharm Khalsa
National Park Service

BREAK

9:00 - 9:30

A Journey Through Subsistence Life: Showcasing Underrepresented Voices of Northwest Alaska through Film
Sarah Betcher
Farthest North Films
University of Alaska Museum of the North

9:30-9:45

Looking at Food: Relating Culinary Cultures of Chukotka through a Relationship of Art and Anthropology
Svetlana Yamin-Pasternak and Igor Pasternak
University of Alaska Fairbanks

9:45-10:00

Discussion and Closing Remarks
Maya Salganek
University of Alaska Fairbanks

SNRE Science & News

Thursday, April 06, 2017

PhD student wins film award

When the UAF International Polar Year Young Researchers' Network asked students' films to be submitted for a competition, Archana Bali (Graduate '10) had an answer. "Voices of the Caribou People," a film Bali shot in collaboration with indigenous communities, was the first place winner of the UFY video contest, and will be shown during the UFY student film festival.

Bali said she undertook the project because she wanted to document the knowledge of indigenous people who have a long relationship with caribou as part of her research. "I wanted to show the negative effects of climate change, industrial development, and disturbance to caribou herds," Bali said. "I wanted to collect information from local people who are making local observations of change, using their own words."

